DOUGLAS OFFICERS CAPTURE MAN FROM OKLAHOMA CAPITAL

Man Wanted for Murder in Oklahoma City Is Captured By Douglas Officers, Who Worked on Case for Several Days.

DOUGLAS, Sept. 25.—One of the cleverest arrests made by the local officers in months occurred last night when Chief of Police W. S. Kirby and Deputy Sheriff L. B. English arrested Baldy Seals, alias Charles S. Davis, alias D. H. Cook, who is wanted in Oklahoma City for the murder of a druggist in that city last March.

Seals or Davis, the names he had been going under here since his arrival from El Paso a few days ago, was arrested yesterday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. by the two officers and lodged in the city jail, pending the arrival of Oklahoma officers, who left last night for Douglas.

The officers have been working on the case since last Monday, when they secured information that Seals was leaving El Paso for Douglas and that he was wanted on a murder charge. Investigation later revealed the fact that it was for complicity in the murder of a druggist in Oklahoma City last March, at which time Seals and two companions shot the man down when he resisted the attempt at robbery of his store. Seals' two companions were caught, but he made his escape. The other accomplices were each sentenced to ninety-nine years in the Oklahoma state penitentiary, according to the information received, while it is stated that the prisoner now in the city jail was the one who did the actual shooting.

Seals, who is about 30 years of age, denied his identity, but is said to have later made incriminating statements, which the two officers who made the catch consider tantamount to a confession that he is the man wanted.

Deputy Sheriff English who assisted Chief Kirby in the case, is a former sheriff of Greenlee county and at the present time the proprietor of the Hadden hotel in this city. Seals when arrested was found to have letters on him addressed to different names under which he had been traveling.

The murder of the druggist, J. C. McDonald, was the culmination of a series of hold-ups which stirred Oklahoma City for months. A gang had been operating there with impunity, and despite the efforts of the officers, were extremely bold in their operations and always successful.

The day of his death, McDonald, who was a man of 30 years old, remarked that he would not resist the hold-ups if they visited his store, on the outskirts of the town, for the paltry sum they might secure from his cash register. Since the killing it has always been the belief that he did attempt to resist, for some reason or other, possibly from fright. His sons were in the store at the time, but were powerless to assist their father, when they saw shot down before their eyes.

McDonald was a Kentuckian by birth, and his death resulted in the Kentucky society raising a fund for the reward and prosecution of the murderers.

BUCKNAM REVIEWS REVIEW EDITORIAL

Temperance Leader Declares
Comments Unfair to Liquor
Reformers in the West

In the following communication, General Secretary Bucknam replies to a Review editorial:

Your editorial on Prohibition cracks and your quotation from the Record of a statement of a New Jersey man, is unfair to the Western reformer. We succeed out here because we adopt broad minded plans and principles and we have the brightest and most liberal minded men and women in our ranks and in our leadership, that can be found in the communities, and I am proud to be associated with them in the work to destroy the great evil and burden we tolerate and bear.

Our National leaders are men who belong to the most powerful business, educational, religious and labor world, and with such leadership nothing can stop our battle for a sober nation.

We do not pick out the over zealous drunk, saloon keeper, or deep and out tramp, and quote him and try to make people think that they are leading the battle to stop progress along temperance lines. The west can not get rid of the trouble, neither can the dry, both sides must tolerate them, and I believe they are a help, as they keep us from going fast. Let us be fair.

ARIZONA GOOD ROADS HOSTS WILL GATHER AT FLAGSTAFF OCT. 9

Prominent Leaders of Movement Will Discuss Measures to Be Taken in Securing System of Better Highways.

Members of the Arizona Good Roads Association have received the following notice from the headquarters of the organization:

"The next conference of the Association will be held at Flagstaff on Saturday, October 9. At this time, when so much important road work throughout the state is about to be undertaken, this meeting should be of special interest and afford an excellent opportunity for all interested in good roads to get together and compare notes for their mutual benefit. We are now assured that practical good roads men from every portion of the state will be in attendance and also hope to have an official representative of the Federal Bureau of Good Roads present, and in addition to our own highway engineer hope, through his co-operation, to have present a representative of the California Highway Commission.

"Among the important subjects which will be discussed will be the following:

"Co-operation of counties on a general highway system.

"The road drag—its importance in road construction in Arizona.

"A uniform system of road accounting.

"The concrete highways, and recent road construction in California.

"Why state and county officials should encourage good roads.

"The importance of county bond issues for good roads.

"Roads on reservations and Federal aid.

"The work of the Woman's Auxiliary.

"Road signs in Arizona.

"Results of the Pan-American Road Congress.

"A road exhibit at the Arizona State Fair.

"We hope to have the definite program prepared and submitted to all members at an early date.

"An earnest invitation to the women of Arizona to attend the conference and take active part in the work of the organization and its future plans, is cordially extended by the officers of the Association. Invitations have also been extended to representatives of the Forest Service and other branches of the Department of the Interior to attend and point out how their different departments can assist in road building work in Arizona.

"You are earnestly invited to be present in person, and also to see that a delegation from your community is in attendance. Boards of supervisors, cities and commercial organizations are entitled to five delegates each, and in addition all members of the Good Roads Association and their friends are entitled to attend the conference.

"Arrangements are being made whereby the receipt certificate plan will be available for the conference. This will enable delegates to attend the meeting for a rate of one and one-third fare. Ask for receipt certificate when purchasing one-way ticket. Present certificate to secretary at the conference for validation, and certificate will then entitle you to return ticket for one-third fare."

"Twenty Speakers" will be the attraction at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday, Sept. 30, at 8 p. m.

The liquor question will be the subject for consideration and each speaker will be given from three to five minutes.

The question is to be considered from every viewpoint, speakers confining themselves to the phase of the question chosen by them.

Some of the best known citizens are among the speakers and the meeting promises to be of great interest.

Some of the subjects assigned are:

The amendment, personal liberty, the saloon or bootlegger and the business man.

The saloon or bootlegger and the miner.

The saloon or bootlegger and the mine operator.

The saloon or bootlegger and the church.

'FROM THE VALLEY OF THE MISSING' AT THE ROYAL TODAY; IS GREAT FOX FEATURE PICTURE

JANE MILLER—AT THE ROYAL TODAY.

As leading woman of the big spectacular melodrama "Life," produced at the Manhattan Opera House, New York City, Jane Miller, made a tremendous success in a most difficult role. William Fox, president of the Fox Film Corporation at once decided to engage this most winning and clever actress for the part of Ann Shelling-ton, in the Fox production of the picture-play made from Grace Miller White's greatest novel "From the Valley of the Missing." This feature appears at the Royal today. Miss Miller is equipped as is no other actress on the boards to enact this most striking of screen roles. She is a southern belle, the daughter of the State Treasurer of Missouri, and before going on the stage had written several successful novels and plays although she is barely out of her teens. It was, in fact, because she did not like the way in which an actress played a principal part in one of her dramas that she decided to act it herself. She admits that her first essay on the stage was not as entirely successful as she had hoped; so she set about studying dramatic art seriously. She enrolled as a student at the Empire School of Dramatic Art in New York City and graduated in record time with the highest honors. Then came an engagement with Madame Nazimova. Miss Miller scored a complete success in a small part and then left the Nazimova company to accept an important role with Mrs. Fiske. She has also played prominent characters with Maud Adams, Robert B. Marcell, Henry Miller and other famous dramatic stars.

Miss Miller advises girls with stage ambitions to study for the pictures instead of striving for success upon the boards. Not only does the screen afford a better opportunity, she declares, but it is distinctly, to her mind, a higher form of art. Of her part in "From the Valley of the Missing" Miss Miller says:—

"Ann Shelling-ton is the most delightful role I have ever played. She is sweet and sympathetic yet endowed with a dash of high spirits and infectious independence that makes her quite irresistible. In the scenes between her brother and Everett and herself she is afforded every dramatic opportunity. The scene with Lead Crank and Lem Crabbe are also among the most effective in which I have ever appeared. I am delighted with the great chance Mr. Fox has given me. I think that for dramatic aspirants picture work is the greatest schooling there is."
